Encounters on the Ice

These encounters are from the adventure Trouble in Ten Towns published by ACW Publishing. Here the encounters have been modified to apply to any campaign set in the Icewind Dale Region. For more of the same, an adventure module, maps, monsters and mgical items see the full adventure.

Ice Mephits

As the characters make their way through a field of ice spikes, unbeknown to them a group of 1d6 Ice Mephits are resting here.

> A field of ice spikes jut out from the snowy landscape. The sharp pieces of ice stand like knives reaching 3 feet up from the snow.

Any creature that moves on the ground within the ice field must make a DC 1 Wisdom (Perception) check or take 1d6 slashing damage.

The mephits use their Innate Spellcasting ability to cast fog cloud and attack the characters from the air avoiding the sharp field of ice spikes.

Creatures automatically fail the check unless the creature has truesight as they are essentially blinded in the fog. The field of ice spikes last for fifty feet, the mephits will wait until the characters are centrally located before attacking. If the characters decide to bypass the ice field the mephits will follow and attack on the outskirts.

Winter Wolf

A Winter Wolf has been stalking the characters for the last hour. It waits until it has the high ground and then strikes. Characters are able to identify they are being tracked by making a DC 15 Wisdom (Perception) check. The winter wolf attacks with surprise if undetected.

> A frozen ravine runs down into the snow drift and provides shelter from the howling wind. The fast crunching of snow above, atop a snowy overhang is followed by a ferocious growl. A gigantic wolf like creature with white fur and pale blue eyes, leaps down from above and attacks.

Howling Wind

Auril's influence on the area causes tortured spirits to cry out on the icy wind. The character are surrounded by nothing but empty white space.

> All around nothing can be seen or heard, crystal white snow stretches out as far as the eye can see. The silence is suddenly broken by a deafening cry for help "SAVE US! SHE IS EVERYWHERE!" heavy winds hit from all sides. The first cry leads on to the next "DEATH!" and again "IT BITES, IT TAKES ALL LIFE!" the screaming on the howling wind is deafening. An immense pressure can be felt all around. The screaming voices continue to multiply.

Frozen Orcs

Five Orcs have frozen to death. They appear to be asleep at first, frozen in time.

> A giant rock sticks out from the icy landscape. A group of medium sized humanoids can be seen gathered in small alcove that hugs the base of the rock. They are not moving, some can be seen perched on smaller elevated rocks appearing as if they are performing a watch. Others are face down in the snow. From a closer standpoint ice and snow can be seen partially covering the still bodies of five orcs.

Snow Storm

A snow storm rages for 1d4 hours, for every round spent exposed in the storm creatures must make DC10 Constitution saving throw or take 1d6 cold damage. Creatures wearing cold weather equipment have advantage on saving throws. Shelter can be found 50 feet along the current path.

> The snow all around begins to become so heavy that it is impossible to see. Heavy winds hammer at the frozen landscape.

All creatures caught in the snow storm are blinded on the second round. To find shelter 50 feet along the path characters must succeed on a DC 18 Wisdom (Perception) check to spot signs that would leave them to believe shelter is nearby. It is then only possible to find shelter by chance stumbling in the storm.

Ask the characters to make a DC 13 Intelligence (Investigation) check to succeed in finding the shelter.

Young White Dragon

A Young White Dragon attacks. The dragon is hungry, with the general order in the region being disrupted by the forces of Auril, prey has been difficult to come by. The young dragon does not engage in conversation unless the characters succeed on a DC15 Charisma check.

The dragons name is Valkoran, she is the original protector of Frosthold and daughter of Arveiaturace the ancient white dragon and Arauthator, nicknamed Old White Death.

Valkoran is driven mad by her hunger, if she is unable to defeat the characters she will aim to knock unconscious, capture and flee with one of the characters.
