KAI DYNASTY

A Forgotten Realms Adventure in the Anauroch

Kai Dynasty is a D&D 5th Edition adventure designed for a DM's use in any Forgotten Realms campaign that take place in or near the Anauroch desert. This adventure includes five NPCs, the background for a lich, and a number of monsters based on the monk psionicists trained by the Kai Dynasty. While this was designed as a level 4 adventure module to be run in about 20 hours, you will notice that the adventure focuses mainly on roleplay and puzzles, and only the NPCs will need to be adjusted to suit the desired difficulty.

KAI DYNASTY

Kai'Tel'Quess means the Kai People in elvish and refers to the descendants and followers of the leaders of a group of psionicist monks from the city of Evereska who travelled east into the Anauroch. These were members of the Kaliesh'Erai, the psionic elves of Evereska, who now practice special forms of martial art at the Kai Monastery in the Anauroch.

—Akai, the youngest of the Kai Dynasty

ABOUT THE ADVENTURE

The Kai Monastery was built in the Anauroch by the elves of Evereska as a safe haven for the Kai'Tel'Quess. It has remained secret until the latest matriarch, Elikai started to spread its notoriety through her evil deeds. In recent years, however, the Kai Monastery has fallen silent again, and only a few know of its existence.

ADVENTURE BACKGROUND

Years ago, Elikai's youngest son Akai interrupted her while she was conducting a ritual to turn herself into a lich. The ritual was almost completed, which meant that Elikai's spirit was put into her phylactery, but she never rose as a lich. Instead, Akai fled from the Kai Monastery with the phylactery, tired of his mother's actions that were giving the Kai'Tel'Quess a bad reputation. Before fleeing from his home and family, he learned that the light of a full moon would complete the ritual and release Elikai, and only in the depths of the Kai Monastery where the phylactery had been forged, could it be destroyed.

Recently, Akai has gotten word from the Kai Monastery that his sister Likai is getting married. He is going to use this opportunity to travel to the Kai Monastery and attempt to destroy Elikai's phylactery. He also misses his siblings, which he knows won't harm him, even though they will most likely attempt to release Elikai.

As a precaution, Akai will gather a group of adventurers that will serve as a backup plan in case he fails, but he will keep the mission on a need-to-know basis since he fears what others may do with Elikai's phylactery, or against his family and the rest of the Kai'Tel'Quess.

ADVENTURE HOOKS

- The players may know Akai personally, although they probably don't know his past, which is something he keeps to himself. Akai will contact the party and invite them along to his sister's wedding, hoping that if anything goes wrong, then the players will help him and finish what he started.
- The players may be travelling the Anauroch, or the area near Evereska, in which case they are hired to escort a group of travelers going into the Anauroch for a mysterious wedding. Akai is hoping that hiring the party is enough for the players to come to his aid and finish what he started if something goes wrong.
- The players may travel to the edge of the Anauroch near Evereska in search of a rare herb that only grows in this area. This is a side quest that can be introduced at the camp after the adventure has started in case the players have one of the other hooks, or it can be used to bring the players to the region where they are then introduced to Akai who gives them one of the previous adventure hook.

IMPORTANT NPCS

The three ruling siblings of the Kai'Tel'Quess play a major role in this adventure, and the party may end up in a confrontation against them. In their journey to the Kai Monastery, the party meet two other important characters who serve as aids and guides to avoid a situation where the players find themselves lost in the Anauroch, which would most likely end in death. All five of these NPCs are described in detail below.

Part 1: Into the Anauroch

The first part of the adventure introduces the players to the NPCs and brings them into the Anauroch. It also introduces them to the plot and eventually leads them to the Kai Monastery where the second part of the adventure begins.

The Camp

On the edge of the Anauroch, at the foot of the Graycloak Hills, the players start in a camp set up by travelers who are gathering to form a caravan that is going to head into the Anauroch. The camp consists of tents of various sizes set up mainly by moon elves. There are a number of camels, the players can purchase a single one if they want. If the players want other gear, some of the merchants have set up tents and smithies where the party can purchase any standard gear as listed in the Player's Handbook.

The camp has been up for about a tenday and it has been growing as people have gathered to prepare the caravan into the Anauroch. In that time a large tent has been set up to serve as a tavern with drinks, food, and music. In other words, the camp is a tool to gather the party, let them purchase gear they need, meet NPCs, and introduce them to the adventure.

Meeting the NPCs

Use the camp to introduce Akai, which in turn introduces his siblings Likai and Takai. The two are very friendly but not very talkative. They try to keep to themselves and attempt to bring Akai away from the party. The three siblings will go to the Kai Monastery, which is a tenday into the Anauroch, before the caravan departs. Likai still has preparations to make for the wedding, and they are only at the camp to meet Akai, which insists that the players should come along to the monastery. When the players are ready, they will depart.

You may also use the camp to introduce Bell and Gimp, and any other side quests you want, including the retrieval of a rare herb that can be found in a nearby cave out in the Anauroch.

Akai's Capture

As the party moves into the Anauroch, not even a day passes before they are separated. This can happen in different ways:

- The party travels to the cave to retrieve the herb, in which case the Kai siblings say that they will meet the party at the first oasis and gives them directions to it. The Kai siblings aren't present at the oasis when the party arrives. If Bell isn't with the party, then they should meet Gimp and his three henchmen on their way to the cave. In exchange for the herbs, Gimp will then serve as a guide through the desert to the Kai Monastery.
- The party is abandoned in the desert by Likai and Takai who capture Akai. The players, now lost in the Anauroch, will have three choices.
    - They can attempt to travel towards the Kai Dynasty and should run into the first oasis. Since it's magical, it doesn't really matter whether the players are lost or not. If Bell isn't with the party, then at the first oasis the party will meet Gimp and his three henchmen.
    - They can travel towards a nearby cave they can see, which is the cave that contains the rare herb as described later. On their way to the cave, if Bell isn't with the party, they meet Gimp and his three henchmen.
    - They can travel towards the mirage of a nearby oasis, which is actually the abode of a druid.
- If all fails, then let a sandstorm hit the party. In this case the party will be saved by the druid but Likai and Takai will capture Akai and hurry towards the Kai Monastery. If this presents itself as a challenge, Likai and Takai can always capture Akai while the party is trying to solve the druid's puzzle as described later.

Desert Weather

A number of rules need to be highlighted as the party travels into the Anauroch.

Extreme Heat: If a character doesn't have access to drinkable water, it needs to succeed a Constitution saving throw at the end of each hour or gain one level of exhaustion. The DC is 5 for the first hour and increases by 1 for each additional hour. Creatures wearing medium or heavy armor, or who are clad in heavy clothing, have disadvantage on the saving throw. Creatures with resistance or immunity to fire damage automatically succeed on the saving throw, as do creatures naturally adapted to hot climates.

Sandstorm: A sandstorm is a heavily obscured area, and any creature in it effectively suffers from the blinded condition. It also imposes disadvantage on ranged weapon attack rolls and Wisdom (Perception) checks that rely on hearing.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

Water: A character needs two gallons of water per day in the Anauroch. A character who drinks only half that much water must succeed on a DC 15 Constitution saving throw or suffer one level of exhaustion at the end of the day. A character with access to even less water automatically suffers one level of exhaustion at the end of the day. If the character already has one or more levels of exhaustion, the character takes two levels in either case. Furthmore, if the character doesn't have access to water, the character also suffers from extreme heat as described above.

Becoming Lost: Without one of the five NPCs described earlier, the party run the risk of becoming lost. The party's navigator makes a Wisdom (Survival) check when you decide it's appropriate, against DC 10. If the party is moving at a slow pace, the navigator gains a +5 bonus to the check, and a fast pace imposes a -5 penalty. Note that the navigator has advantage on the check when the character can see the sun or stars.

If the Wisdom (Survival) check succeeds, the party travels in the desired direction without becoming lost. If the check fails, the party inadvertently travels in the wrong direction and becomes lost. The party's navigator can repeat the check after the party spends 1d6 hours trying to get back on course.

If the party gets lost before reaching the first oasis, then let the druid described later save them. After meeting the druid, the party will find their way to the first oasis, which is magical in nature and which therefore finds them even if they are lost. At this oasis the party should meet Gimp and three of his henchmen, who have disguised themselves as entertainers for the Kai wedding in the hopes of stealing from the Kai Monastery.

The Herb Cave

In a cave at the outskirts of the Anauroch grows a rare herb. An Intelligence (History) check DC 20 lets a character know the myth of the cave. Years ago, a wife's husband found an abandoned goblin cave and ventured into it in search of treasure. The wife quickly followed her husband down into the cave. Instead of treasure he found a beautiful flower, which he was picking as his wife caught up to him. He was surprised when his wife startled him and mysteriously and ferociously attacked her, killing her.

An Intelligence (Nature) check DC 25 reveals that the flower is poisonous. In its natural state it must be inhaled and exudes a dose each round for 5 rounds in a 10-foot sphere. When the flower is dried it can be combined with food or drinks to be ingested instead. The character also learns the following about the herb.

Rage Herb (Inhaled/Ingested). A creature subjected to this poison must make a DC 17 Constitution saving throw or be poisoned for 1 minute. The poisoned creature suffers from a fit of rage and attacks the nearest creature while under the effects of rage.

- The poisoned creature has advantage on Strength checks and Strength saving throws.
- When the poisoned creature makes a melee weapon attack using Strength, it gains a +2 bonus to the damage roll.
- The poisoned creature has resistance to bludgeoning, piercing, and slashing damage.

The cave itself is guarded by 4 dryads who will defend the plants and attempt to chase away the players. They are also susceptible to the poison and thus keeps away from it. There are large roots in the cave that belong to elephant plants that grow on top of the cave.

The Druid Lair

Whether the local druid saves the party from the Anauroch, or the players seek out the mirage of an oasis, they will end up in a large underground cavern with trees, roots, and vines. At the entrance the druid requires the party to leave anything made of metal here. They can recover their items when they leave again. A Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check DC 15 allows a character to bring metal objects into the druid's lair.

Within the lair are a number of animals as described later. There is also a lake with a foot of water in it and a small island in the middle, a protruding rock. Hovering above the rock near the ceiling is a bright glowing star that gives light to the lair. A small alcove serves as the druid's kitchen and bedroom.

Puzzle

The players are welcome to rest and are free to leave whenever they want to. The druid has a puzzle for them though, but they are not forced to accept the challenge of solving it or even solve it.

The druid explains that the puzzle is to touch the star without touching the water.

As a hint, the star always moves in the opposite direction of how the water moves. So if the party splashes around in the water, the star will vibrate before returning to its original position. If the party tries to remove water from the lake, the star will move upwards. Throwing water up in the air will simply have it fall back down, in which case the star will move downwards and then back up to its original position. Climbing up to the star or shooting it doesn't solve the riddle, as the solution requires the party to bring the star down to the ground.

To solve the puzzle, the party needs to gather a container of water and bring the water up to the ceiling by climbing the trees on the outskirts of the cavern, which will have the star move out to the opposite end of the cavern and down to the ground. Climbing the trees requires a Strength (Athletics) check DC 10. Note that if a container touches the water, the party isn't touching it.

Completing the puzzles rewards the party with a creature of their choice that the druid gives them. They can choose from any of the creatures present in the cavern. Each creature grants an additional party bonus.

- A hungry wolf that needs to be fed often but grants advantage on saving throws against fear. If it isn't fed properly it will leave the party.
- A disloyal raven that stand sentry and mimics an alarm if a non-party member comes within 50 feet of it. Shushing the raven makes it fly away, never to return.
- A vain amur leopard (use panther stats) that requires a lot of sweet talking to. Once per day when a spellcaster in the party finishes a short rest, that character can choose 2 expended spell slots to recover. If the party doesn't say good things to the leopard at least once per day, the leopard will leave the party.
- A bobcat (use cat stats) that likes heat. It grants party members within 30 feet, blindsight 30 ft. It needs to be kept warm and if it is ever cold (70 degrees Fahrenheit or below), then it will leave the party.
- A photosensitive bat that lets the party see through disguises without having to make a check. If the bat is ever subjected to light, it will fly away, never to return.
- A greedy pixie that gives advantage to wisdom checks but requires a daily fee. If the pixie isn't paid, it will leave the party.

The First Oasis

People who travel into the Anauroch to reach the Kai Monastery travel along a series of magical oases. The whole journey takes a tenday, with an oasis located at the end of each day's travel. The first oasis thus lies 12 miles into the Anauroch, which takes a day to reach since the desert counts as difficult terrain. The oases are magical in a variety of ways.

Caretaker: Each oasis has a caretaker, an unspecified powerful magical creature that tends to the oasis and ensures its magical properties. Some say that the caretakers themselves aren't magical, but that the rod that they wield are powerful magical items that control the oases.

Find the Living: The oasis detects nearby life and moves to make it easier for people to find the oasis. This ensures that whether the players are going the right way or not, they should be able to find the oasis.

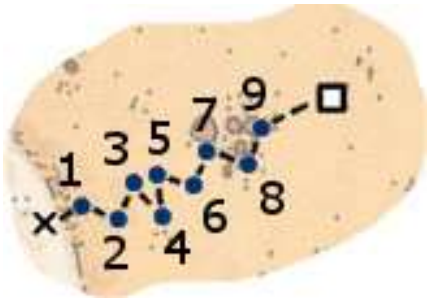

Fresh Water: The water in the oasis is endless and always fresh and pure, even when others attempt to poison or foul it.

Food: There's always an abundance of various fruits and meat available to gather and hunt in the oasis.

Protection: The oasis provides protection. Any fighting or threats are taken harshly. If the party is involved they will be warned. If there's a continued aggression or a second incident, the party will be magically banned from all the oases, making it impossible for them to find any of the oases in the desert, which may lead to their eventual death.

Chase through the Anauroch

Once at the first oasis, you should mark down Takai and Likai's location. The party now needs to chase these through the desert in an attempt to catch up to them before they reach the Kai Monastery. Below is a map of the desert including the magical oases in the way.

Cross: The cross on the map represents the camp where the party starts the adventure. If you want to put a city, or name the camp, then call it Behal.

Square: The square on the map represents the Kai Monastery, where the second part of the adventure takes place.

Blue Circles: The blue circles are the nine magical oases. There's a day of travel between each, as marked by the black lines. Note that the last stretch between the ninth oasis and the Kai Monastery includes a path, which counts as normal terrain instead of difficult terrain. If the players go in a straight line, then there's 18 miles (1½ day of travel) between the uneven oases, and between oasis 6 and 8. There's 13 miles between oasis 2 and 4, and the same between 4 and 6, which should take less than an hour extra than travelling the usual 12 miles per day.

Between Oasis 3 and 5: There's only 6 miles between these two oasis, but this path is rarely used. It is meant as a tool for the DM, so that you can either slow down the party or give them a chance to catch up to the Kai siblings. To slow down the party, the Kai siblings may take this path while the party travels around, or the party may take this path and end up in quicksand, which is the reason why there's a path around it. Travelling from oasis 3 to 4 takes a day as there's 12 miles, and so does travelling from oasis 4 to 5.

Quicksand: When the party reaches the quicksand area, they will sink 1d4 + 1 feet into the ground and become restrained. At the start of each of the party member's turns, it sinks another 1d4 feet to a maximum of 10 feet. As long as the party member isn't submerged in quicksand, it can escape by using its action and succeeding on a Strength check. The DC is 10 plus the number of feet the party member has sunk into the quicksand. A party member that is completely submerged in quicksand can't breathe and starts suffocating as described in the Player's Handbook. Another party member can pull out someone in the quicksand by using its action and succeeding on a Strength check. The DC is 5 plus the number of feet the target creature has sunk into the quicksand. The result of using the quicksand should either be that the players return to the previous oasis, and thus loses up to a day of travel, or they travel so slowly between oasis 3 and 5 that it takes them 12 hours of travelling.

Catching up to Takai and Likai: Remember to take into account tracking, gathering food and water, force marching, and fast pacing. Also remember to account for Takai and Likai's increased speed and their burden of carrying Akai. The party shouldn't catch up at this point in the adventure, but if it does happen, then a fight may occur. Akai doesn't want to be rescued but will ensure that if the party is defeated, they are not killed and instead left at one of the magical oases.

Random Encounter

If you want to add more fighting, or if the players don't chase the Kai siblings through the desert and you want more excitement, then you can use the following random encounter table. It includes both day and night encounters. If you roll a night encounter during the day, then let the encounter happen at night or in the evening or morning, but remember that no encounters should occur while the party is within one of the nine magical oases.

Random Encounter Table

d10	Encounter
1	1d4 Giant Scorpions

Part 2: Kai Monastery

The second part of the adventure takes place at the Kai Monastery during Likai's fake wedding. This is the main part of the adventure, and if the party hasn't reached level 6 yet, then use the milestone rules to level them up once they reach the last oasis a day's travel from the Kai Monastery.

This part of the adventure describes an event, which is the main plot, and then each area of interest in the monastery. It is up to you as the DM to roleplay the event and change the content of each location to suit the storyline of this part of the adventure.

Monastery Event

The party should arrive at the monastery after Akai has been captured and after Takai and Likai return home. Guests are arriving through the oases route, including Bell and Gimp. There's an abundance of treasures being brought as gifts to Likai and her new husband. There are guards and many others, which should make it easy for the party to enter the monastery. If they try to simply walk in, they are required to deliver a gift at M3: Gate, just as any other guest, before they are allowed into M4: Square.

General Event

Upon arrival to the monastery, most guests are at M1: Last Oasis while the inhabitants and guards of the monastery are within the monastery itself. As the day progresses, more and more travel from M1: Last Oasis to M3: Gate where they are admitted after presenting a gift to the bride and groom, which servants bring to M7: Castle.

Most guests rest at M1: Last Oasis, but the richest take up residence at M5: Tavern. On the wedding night, guests rest in M4: Square while inhabitants of the monastery are scattered across M7: Castle after a long day and night of partying and carousing.

During the wedding itself, people gather in M4: Square to witness the event, and the party that follows is held in M7: Castle where everyone is admitted to the lower levels to eat, drink, and dance.

Gimp and his henchmen will disguise themselves as servants. They will poison the ale and distribute it, which should cause fights to erupt around the monastery. They use this distraction to steal treasure from M7: Castle. Some or all of the henchmen may be captured and sent to M6: Prison where the players can then free them.

Whether Bell is with the party or not, she will be present and attempt to help Akai. She will be captured and sent to M6: Prison where she can only wait for rescue from the players.

Kai Siblings

Upon arrival to the monastery, Takai and Likai will take Akai into M7: Castle and upstairs to their room, where they will tie him up and take Elikai's phylactery from him. Akai will try to convince Takai and Likai to destroy the amulet, or at least not release Elikai from it. Takai and Likai plan on releasing Elikai at the next full moon, which will occur the day after the wedding.

For a day or two the Kai siblings aren't seen. Takai spends most of his time in his or Akai's room. Akai is imprisoned in his room where he is often questioned by Takai, and occasionally by Likai. Likai spends most of her time with servants, preparing for the wedding and preparing herself for the event. This time should be used by the players to explore and investigate the monastery. If they ask about the Kai siblings, they are informed that they are getting ready for the wedding. They may even infiltrate the upper levels of M7: Castle by impersonating some of the servants.

The wedding itself is held out in the square around midday. M7: Castle will be completely off limits and the guests will all be out in M4: Square with M3: Gate being closed. At this point M5: Tavern will be completely empty. Akai will attend the wedding at his own free will, still believing that Likai's wedding isn't a ruse.

After the wedding there's the party, which lasts all night. At this time, Akai will sit next to Likai and Takai at the high table on the upper level of M7: Castle. This area should be hard to get to, and even if the party gets to Akai, they will quickly learn that he is there at his own free will.

The day before the full moon, which is also the day after the wedding, Takai and Likai will be in Akai's room while Akai is trying to convince them not to release Elikai. This is the party's last chance to get the amulet before the Kai siblings release their mother Elikai.

Releasing Elikai

If the party fails to destroy the phylactery, or at least escape the monastery with it, then Elikai will appear when the light of the full moon touches the amulet on the night after the wedding day. Elikai is a lich. Takai and Likai has set up the wedding both to lure Akai back home, but also to lure a large number of guests that may serve as offerings to Elikai. At this point the adventure is over as Elikai kills everyone in the monastery.

M1: Last Oasis

The last oasis is the ninth oasis, and it is similar to the other eight magical oases. From this oasis, however, there is a path that leads to the Kai Monastery, which means that the terrain is no longer difficult terrain. There's about a day's journey from the last oasis to the Kai Monastery, approximately 24 miles.

Use the last oasis as a gathering point in case the party flees from the monastery, splits up, or you want to introduce NPCs. You can also use this location for the players to buy supplies from travelling merchants before heading into the Kai Monastery, or let them heal up before facing the next part of the adventure.

M2: Outside the Monastery

The monastery is like a small city. The key structures are show in the map, with two additional towers set on each side of the gate. The rest are walls, which also houses other structures and the rest of the Kai'Tel'Quess. The monastery is thus about 2,000 feet by 1,000 feet.

The walls themselves consist of a 30-foot high structures, except where there are buildings of note, which are taller.

If the party explores the surroundings around the monastery, they encounter Lisu, a cat. If the party is kind to the cat and succeeds at a Wisdom (Animal Handling) check DC 10, then Lisu will show the players a hidden mound on the west side of the monastery near M6: Prison. This mound contains a secret entrance that can easily be opened from the outside and leads into M8: Underground.

M3: Gate

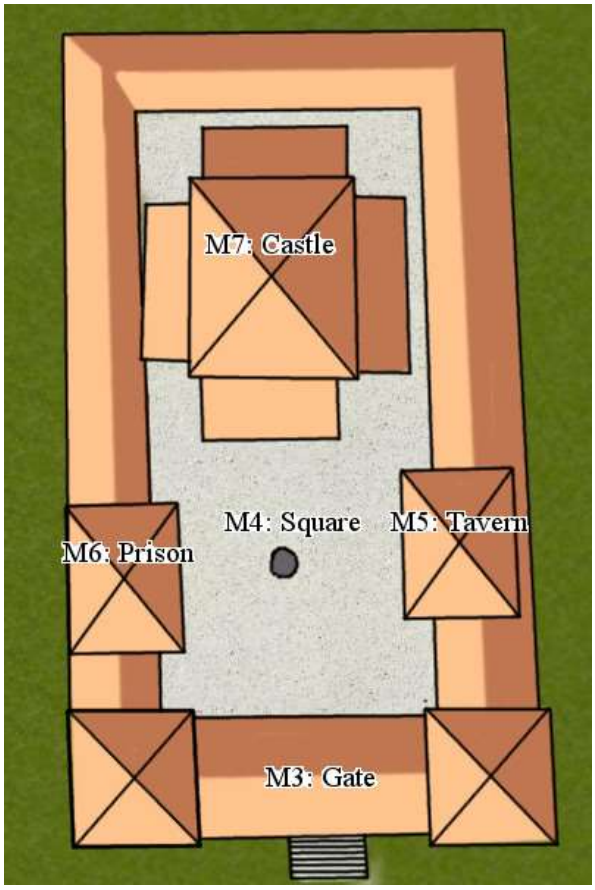

Steps lead up to the gate, which consists of two large wooden doors. At least 2 kai guards are present here at all times, and sometimes there are more, such as when guests are arriving at the monastery. It takes the guards a few rounds to close the heavy doors serving as a gate.

The gate is flanked by two large square towers that the players shouldn't access during this adventure.

M4: Square

The square is close to 600 feet by 600 feet with a large statue in the middle depicting the founder of the Kai Monastery. This square will be where the wedding takes place and the majority of the guests will party and sleep.

M5: Tavern

The tavern is very large and houses the wealthiest guests. There's also a bar, eating area, and stage. This is a great place to introduce missing NPCs, such as Gimp and Bell, before they are captured, for the players to gather information if they get stuck, or give them clues and side quests.

The most notable feature with the tavern is the secret passage behind the counter of the bar that leads down to M8: Underground. This passage can be found with an Intelligence (Investigation) check DC 15, but requires the players to have access to the area behind the counter.

The most notable side quest are two wealthy women who are staying at the tavern. If the party is having a hard time contacting Akai and learning the truth of what's going on, these women can indirectly help the players. They have additional gifts to the bride and groom, which needs to be brought up to the upper levels of M7: Castle. The players can be the ones carrying the gifts, or they can hide within the gifts, or anything else that they can come up with.

M6: Prison

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

The prison is a large structure with a dungeon below it. Within the dungeon there's a passage that leads into M8: Underground.

The prison is where Gimp's henchmen and/or Bell is put behind bars during the events that take place at the Kai Monastery. The players may also end up here. Note that there are usually kai guards present here to keep the prisoners behind bars, and keep others out of M8: Underground.

M7: Castle

The castle is a large structure with a lower level and an upper level. On the lower level there is the entry, the main hall, and the two side towers, which include kitchens, storage rooms, and other such rooms. The upper level has the private chambers and the balcony, along with the two towers that have storage, armory and other such rooms.

Lower Level – Entry: The entry is a short hall built mainly to ensure insulation in the castle from the heat of the Anauroch. Most don't linger here, but guards are often present to ensure the safety of the residents. The guards may even search the players for weapons and such.

Lower Level – Main Hall: The main hall is a large hall with pillars. The ceiling towers to the top of the castle, making space for balconies surrounding the hall in the upper level. There are two doors on either side of the hall along with the double doors from the entry. This chamber is used for the main feast where everyone is invited. Large tables are set and food and drinks are served while the Kai family sits at the high table on the balcony.

Lower Level – Towers: Though there aren't towers on the outside of the castle, there are two towers built into the infrastructure. These serve as stairs to the upper level along with housing all the other rooms on the lower levels, such as the kitchen, pantry, storage, servant chambers, lounges, toilets, and so forth. There's also a secret passage that leads down to M8: Underground, which the players may find with an Intelligence (Investigation) check DC 25.

Upper Level – Towers: The circular stairs in the towers are one of the only ways to go between the lower and upper level, unless you have rope and want to climb the balcony in the main hall. These stairs are usually left unguarded. Mostly servants move around here. If the players are disguised it should be easy for them to move around unnoticed.

Upper Level – Balcony: On the upper level there's a hall that leads to the balcony, which looks out over the main hall. During the wedding, this balcony is furnished with a long table where the bride and groom sits along with the rest of the Kai family and the most important residents of the Kai Monastery. Kai Guards will also be present, so it'll be difficult for the players to reach or speak with Akai. Even if they accomplish this, Akai wants to sit by his sister's side for this occasion, and thus doesn't need saving.

Upper Level – Chambers: There are a number of large and luxurious chambers on the upper level accessible through the hall connecting the towers and the balcony. These chambers are the private residences of the Kai siblings, including their mothers' room, which may give a few hints to any player investigating it, which is up to the DM. Most of the time, Akai will be tied up to a chair in his own chambers while trying to convince his siblings to destroy the amulet, while they try to convince him that it would be best to release their mother.

M8: Underground

The underground is the beginning and the end of the adventure. It is within one of the rooms in the underground that Elikai conducted her ritual and became a lich. At the end of the ritual, Akai interrupted and stole the phylactery, trapping his mother in it. This is why this place is also the only place that the phylactery can be destroyed.

Tunnels connect the underground to four key locations:

1. M2: Outside the Monastery – There's a tunnel that leads to the earth mount outside the monastery. Opening this passage from the underground takes more time and requires some digging. If the players are fighting or fleeing, they won't be able to escape this way unless they have already opened up the mound.
2. M5: Tavern – There's a trapdoor in the tavern behind the counter in the bar. It's completely visible from the underground, but note that coming up into the tavern will most likely alert the barkeeper, patrons, and possibly guards too.
3. M6: Prison – The prison is the most heavily guarded entrance into the underground but also the easiest. Here, it's simply a passage that often, but not always, is closed off by a gate.
4. M7: Castle – Within one of the internal towers of the castle is a secret passage, which is also hidden from within the underground. Finding this passage requires an Intelligence (Investigation) check DC 25.

Within the underground there's also a chamber that once served as Elikai's ritual chamber. It has been emptied and cleared out, but a single mechanism is still partly in place, which has become a trap. Anyone going to or from the M2 entrance needs to go through this room, and just as they enter the room going from the M2 entrance, the trap is sprung. Only by using this trap to damage the phylactery, can the amulet be destroyed.

Rolling Stone Wheel Trap – A groove in the floor lets a large heavy rolling stone wheel roll back and forth, crushing anyone who isn't careful when entering or exiting the room. Elikai's phylactery can only be destroyed by placing it in the groove in the floor and letting the wheel break the amulet.

With a successful Wisdom (Perception) DC 11 check a character can spot the groove in the floor and hear the rolling wheel. The wheel becomes apparent when looking closer counting as an automatic success on any Intelligence (Investigation) checks. The wheel rolls initiative with a +5 bonus. On its turn, it moves across the room in a straight line following the groove in the floor. Whenever the wheel enters a creature's space or a creature enters its space while it's rolling, that creature must succeed on a DC 11 Dexterity saving throw or take 11 (2d10) bludgeoning damage and be knocked prone.

As an action, a creature within 5 feet of the wheel can attempt to slow it down with a DC 20 Strength check. On a successful check, the wheel is stopped until the creature lets go of it.

Conclusion

If the players fail to at least recover Elikai's phylactery, she will be released and slay all the guests in the monastery.

The players could also destroy Elikai's phylactery, which won't hold back Takai and Likai's wrath. Akai doesn't want harm to come to his brother and sister, and he will defend them if the players attack them.

The players may find themselves in a fight against Takai and Likai where Akai is actively against them. Akai will focus on trying to get the phylactery and destroy it. If he can't do that, he will at least attempt to flee with the amulet. He will, however, ensure that the players aren't going to try to kill Takai and Likai, and instead try to flee with him.

At the end of the adventure, the players should be rewarded with a level. As a monetary reward, Bell and/or Gimp may have gathered some magical items or money for the players. One suggestion is to give the party two magical weapons +1, which were found in the wedding gifts.

Appendix A: New Monsters

Kai'Tel'Quess

Kai'Tel'Quess means the Kai People in elvish and refers to a dynasty of elves who rule a city state in the Anauroch desert. The Kai'Tel'Quess includes all those that serve and learn under this specific dynasty, which is currently being run by three siblings: Akai, Takai, and Likai.

Descendants of the Kaliesh'erai. Two brothers and a sister of the psionic elves of Evereska left the organization to pursui more selfish things through adventures in the Anauroch desert. In their old age they built a monastery that was to become their dynasty's abode and city state.

Children of Evil. The previous leader of the Kai Dynasty was an evil woman with both arcane and psionic powers that did horrible things. She was eventually trapped in a magical amulet and the rule passed on to her children, who still follow her teachings and methods.

Kai Teachers. Those that learn under the Kai Dynasty are taught different things depending on their aptitude. Some are trained as monks while others focus more on psionic affinity. Anyone taught are given the name of the Kai who came up with that specific training method. Only Kai's who excel at both the monastic and the psionic part of the teachings are immortalized by using their names in specific training methods.

Jakai. Jakai was a Kai who believed in the order of all things. He learned psionics from a githzerai and the Way of the Four Elements from a true master.

Jukai. Jukai was a Kai who believed in teaching quickly. Those under his tutelage quickly came into their own but were never as powerful as other monks and psionicists.

Pekai. Pekai was a Kai who believed in endurance and survival. He never learned all the finesse of things, but by combining martial arts and psionics, he was able to boost himself enough to withstand any attack.
