ADVENTURE PRIMER

"We dragons pride ourselves on grace and majesty… except that one. The flying stink barrel. He's an embarrassment to the species."

Saryndalaghlothtor, "Lady Gemcloak"

Bad Weather Over Longsaddle is designed for three to seven 1st-2nd-level characters and is optimized for five characters with an average party level (APL) of 1. Characters outside this level range cannot participate in this adventure. This adventure occurs in Longsaddle.

Background

The hardy folk of LONGSADDLE have had about all they can stomach. See, for weeks now, a mischievous copper dragon - goes by the name of OL' STINKYBUTT to anyone who's had the misfortune of looking up at the wrong time - has been flying over the farms, bombarding homesteads with something a whole lot worse than fire and brimstone. DRAGON POOP.

Roofs have been busted, wells fouled, and more than a few poor longhorns and ranch hands ended up injured. When the folk of Longsaddle went complaining to THE HARPELLS, the hamlet's long-standing family of eccentric wizards, the wizards answered with what can only be described as a collective shrug. Busy with arcane experiments and none too keen on tromping after dragons, they decided the problem was better solved by handing it off to a few adventurers who could face down the dragon and set things right again.

Overview

The adventure begins with a Call to Action scene and has one main Part. The adventure takes approximately 1 hour to play.

Call to Action. As the characters head northwest, following rumors of dragon activity, they come across the aftermath of a recent flyover. Following the trail of destruction is the Call to Action.

Part 1. Wranglers. The characters encounter the copper dragon up to their old tricks. Convincing Ol' Stinkybutt to stop defecating on the properties, people, and beasts of Longsaddle is the Story Objective.

Adventure Hook

Use these hooks to explain why the characters are in Longsaddle.

Longrider. The character has heard that Longsaddle is a place where fortunes are made. Out on these frontier lands, ranchers, farmers, and wizards are always looking to hire folks who can fend off monsters, cattle thieves, and the occasional band of marauding barbarians.

Longsaddler. The character is or was a resident of Longsaddle or the surrounding lands. They know the local faces, the Harpells' reputation, and just how weird things can get around these parts. They might be just as strange themselves and have been accepted as part of the community all the same.

Faction Agent. The character is working with one of the many factions of Faerûn, an adventuring society, or a guild. Either way, they are temporarily stationed in Longsaddle between missions, gathering information, maintaining a presence, or awaiting new orders.

Harpell Apprentice. The character is currently staying at Ivy Mansion as part of an apprenticeship. Under the tutelage of the Harpells, they've been learning spells, dodging experiments gone wrong, and helping contain magical accidents. When the Harpells need someone to handle a strange task or investigate a disturbance, it's usually the apprentices who get volunteered.

Call to Action

Estimated Duration. 15 minutes

The characters have been hired out of Longsaddle to look into a local nuisance, a copper dragon that goes by the name Ol' Stinkybutt. He's been flying over the ranchlands, dropping foul surprises on roofs, wells, and anyone unlucky enough to be caught outside. The Harpells want the party to tell him to knock it off, preferably without undue violence, and have promised a reward through the family's discretionary reward system. That is wizard talk for "we will give you a magic item," though they have not exactly said what kind. Still, a bit of magic in the pouch never hurts in this line of work.

To help the characters, the Harpells have even provided a gift for the dragon, or as some folks call it, a bribe. It is an enormous, lumpy statue of a longhorn cow with one horn longer than the other and eyes that do not quite point in the same direction. Hauling the ugly thing is a wooden cart hitched to Honey (mule), a shaggy, unimpressed-looking mule. The Harpells also provide each character with a riding horse (for medium-size characters) or a mastiff (for small-size characters) with accompanying riding saddles. The mastiffs resemble giant Welsh corgis.

Based on recent sightings, the Harpells believe Ol' Stinkybutt is a young dragon and reckon the characters are most likely to find him by patrolling the ranchlands northwest of the hamlet.

Call to Action

Following the trail of destruction is the Call to Action.

That's One Big Pile of Dung

The characters begin their patrol the moment they depart the frontier hamlet of Longsaddle, heading northwest toward the ranchlands where Ol' Stinkybutt has been most active. The plains stretch out in every direction, a sea of golden grasses rippling in the wind. Scattered buttes rise like sunbaked sentinels from the flatland. Here and there, sagebrush clings to the cracked earth, and narrow game trails wind between patches of scrub and dry creek beds. On clear days, the jagged peaks of the Crag Mountains loom far to the north.

On the third day of traveling the plains, the characters come across the aftermath of a recent flyover. Read aloud or paraphrase the following:

> A foul wind hits you first. Just over the next rise, you find the source: a steaming mound of dung the size of a hay bale. It's fresh. Swarming with flies. Just as you're taking in the sheer scale, and smell, of the mess, a wet squelch breaks the silence. The dung pile shifts. Then again. A hand, coated elbow-deep in filth, reaches out and grabs the grass. "Help.. urk.. somebody help me!"

Area Information

This stretch of the plains have the following features.

Terrain. The plains stretch wide and open, a sea of tall grasses dotted with wildflowers, sagebrush, and the occasional lone tree or rocky outcrop. Characters can see about 2 miles in any direction on a clear day, except where obstructions block their view.

Lighting. During the day, the plains are bathed in bright light. A rocky outcrop or a lone tree provides shade, creating areas of dim light beneath them.

Sounds. Wind rustling through grass is a near-constant presence.

Weather. The plains are generally dry, with light winds. Daytime temperatures average around 72°F (22°C), while nights grow chilly, dropping to approximately 47°F (8°C).

Tracks. A character can use the Search action to inspect the tracks left behind by Lee's longhorns. On a DC 10 Wisdom (Survival) check, they see clear signs that a herd of longhorns passed through the area approximately four hours ago. Their hoofprints are scattered and erratic, suggesting they were spooked and fled in a panic. They fled north.

Dragon Dung. A steaming pile of dragon dung, roughly the size of a hay bale. A character can use the Study action to inspect the pile of dung left behind by Ol' Stinkybutt. If they succeed on a DC 15 Intelligence (Nature) check, they learn that the dung is mildly acidic and unfit for fertilizer. Its corrosive properties are too weak to be used as a weapon in its raw form.

THE HARPELLS' GIFT

The characters are delivering a 400 lbs. stone statue of a poorly crafted longhorn cow, hauled by cart and a mule named Honey. Each player character is also provided with a mount and saddle. The statue, cart, mounts, riding saddles, and mule are story items and may not be kept after the adventure. Pay attention to what the characters do with the cart and statue in Part One, Encounter A.

Creature Information

Buried in the dragon dung is an unfortunate human ranch hand struggling to climb out of the muck. Lee (scout) is currently at 2 hit points due to a busted hip from falling off their horse. Lee has the prone and restrained condition and two levels of exhaustion. A character can pull her free with a DC 10 Strength (Athletics) check. On a success, Lee is freed and immediately collapses to catch her breath.

Lee explains she was watching Mister Zelorrgosz's longhorns when something struck her and knocked her off her horse. Before she could react, she found herself buried in dragon dung. As she scans the area, panic sets in when she realizes the herd is gone. With rising urgency, she begs the characters to help round up the lost longhorns. If the characters ask about a reward, Lee promises she can pay them in coin. She explains that she had been saving up to visit the Gambling Golem, but has no problem parting with the gold if it means keeping her job.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

LEE

Neutral Human (she/her) unfortunate rancher

Lee is a lanky teenager with sunburned skin and a mess of straw-colored hair. She wears a too-big canvas duster over patched overalls and scuffed boots, all of which are currently caked in dragon dung.

What They Want. Lee just wants to round up her runaway longhorns, get them back to Zelorrgosz's ranch before sundown, and take a bath.

Rustic Drawl. Lee speaks in a slow, plainspoken cowboy drawl and light on punctuation. She uses phrases like "reckon," "ain't right," and "more trouble than a rattlesnake in a washbasin." Lee refers to Ol' Stinkybutt only as "that airborne menace."

Lasso Maker. Lee is an avid lasso enthusiast who spends her spare time crafting lassos by hand while keeping watch over Zelorrgosz's cattle.

Not too far from the scene is Lucky (riding horse), Lee's horse, grazing on the grass. Either on her own or with the characters' help, Lee limps over and rummages through Lucky's saddlebags. She pulls out a set of five lassos and hands them out to the characters. As she distributes them, she offers a few quick tips on their use: success depends more on timing and control than raw strength. Once the loop lands, the wrangler must pull the rope taut and hold firm to guide the animal.

Once the characters are ready to move on, proceed to Part 1.

LASSO

A lasso is a loop of rope designed to be thrown around a target and pulled tight to catch or restrain it. Commonly used by ranchers, it's a practical tool for wrangling cattle or other large animals. Treat each lasso as a reskinned Net.

NET

Adventuring Gear

Weight: 3 lb. Cost: 1 GP

When you take the Attack action, you can replace one of your attacks with throwing a Net. Target a creature you can see within 15 feet of yourself. The target must succeed on a Dexterity saving throw (DC 8 plus your Dexterity modifier and Proficiency Bonus) or have the Restrained condition until it escapes. The target succeeds automatically if it is Huge or larger.

To escape, the target or a creature within 5 feet of it must take an action to make a DC 10 Strength (Athletics) check, freeing the Restrained creature on a success. Destroying the Net (AC 10; 5 HP; Immunity to Bludgeoning, Poison, and Psychic damage) also frees the target, ending the effect.

PART 1: WRANGLERS

Estimated Duration. 45 minutes

It takes about an hour of travel before the characters spot a herd of longhorns grazing in the distance, roughly two miles ahead. From their vantage point, they can clearly make out a large copper dragon, about the size of a lanky warhorse, soaring high above the plains. The dragon circles lazily above the herd like a bird of prey. When the characters close to within a mile, the dragon climbs higher into the sky and vanishes into the clouds.

Story Objective

Convincing Ol' Stinkybutt to stop defecating on the properties, people, and beasts of Longsaddle is the Story Objective.

Encounter A. Time to Wrangle

It takes approximately 15 minutes for the party to reach the area. Read aloud or paraphrase the following:

> Up ahead, a small herd of cattle grazes peacefully. As you approach, the herd suddenly bolts, bellowing and crashing into one another in panic. A moment later, the cause becomes clear. A pack of jackals bursts from the tall grass and fans out behind the cattle, barking and yipping as they nip at the herd's flanks.

Area Information

The plains share the same general features outlined in the Call to Action, though without the presence of dragon dung.

Creature Information

There are a number of longhorns (ox) equal to the number of player characters. Each longhorn begins the encounter with a Hostile attitude and starts 40 feet away from the characters, fleeing across the plains in the same direction. The longhorns are being pursued by two jackalweres in jackal form, who are focused on driving one of the cattle away from the herd. The jackalwere begin the encounter with a Hostile attitude and start 20 feet away from the longhorns.

Unbeknownst to the characters, these jackalweres are members of the Gogan Brothers Gang, a fiendish family of notorious outlaws responsible for rustling, thefts, and scams along The Long Road. The jackalweres are not initially interested in the characters and attempt to complete their hunt. If the characters interfere, the jackalweres defend themselves but will attempt to flee if reduced to the bloodied condition. The Gogan siblings constantly bicker among themselves, blaming each other for any setbacks and fumbling through makeshift strategies. If they flee, they split up in different directions to make pursuit more difficult.

ADJUSTING THE SCENE

Here are some suggestions for adjusting this scene:

- Very Weak. Replace one jackalwere with two jackals
- Average. Two jackalweres. Longhorns equal to the number of player characters
- Strong. Add a jackalwere
- Very Strong. Add a jackalwere

Wilderness Chase

Use map 2.2 as the battle map for this encounter and map 2.3 as the chase tracker (see Appendix 1). The longhorns are the targets of the chase and remain at the 0 marker. The jackalweres begin at the -20 ft. marker, and the characters start at the -40 ft. marker. All movement is tracked relative to the longhorns, who are always treated as staying at +0 for simplicity. When the longhorns move, all other participants fall back by the same distance. For example, if the longhorns move 40 feet, all pursuers shift 40 feet farther from the 0 marker. At initiative count 0 each round, any longhorn not within line of sight of either the characters or the jackals makes a Dexterity (Stealth) check with disadvantage. On the open plains, longhorns can disappear from view behind rocky outcrops, in dry creek beds, through tall prairie grasses, or behind scattered trees and dust clouds. If the result exceeds the highest passive Perception among the pursuers, that longhorn escapes the chase and cannot be recovered.

The jackalweres abandon the chase once they have rendered a longhorn unconscious using their Sleep Gaze. Once a longhorn collapses, the jackalweres close in for the slaughter.

Running the Chase

A chase participant can take the Dash action a number of times equal to 3 plus its Constitution modifier (minimum of once). Each additional Dash action it takes during the chase requires the creature to succeed on a DC 10 Constitution saving throw at the end of its turn or gain 1 Exhaustion level. A participant drops out of the chase if its Speed is 0.

During the chase, participants can make attacks, cast spells at creatures within range, or perform the Influence action if adjacent to a longhorn. A character can attempt to calm and control a longhorn by using the Influence action to make a Wisdom (Animal Handling) check against DC 15. On a success, the longhorn settles down and stops resisting. On a failure, the creature remains agitated and continues trying to flee. If a longhorn is restrained or otherwise unable to flee, it drops out of the chase.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

Wilderness Complications

Once the stampede begins, the longhorns tear across the open prairie in a blind panic, kicking up dust and mowing through brush. The herd moves as one, hooves pounding like thunder, but any creature close behind quickly realizes that the plains are far from smooth. Dry creek beds, gnarled trees, and windblown hazards turn the chase into a series of unpredictable challenges.

At the end of each participant's turn, roll 1d12. On a result of 1–6, roll or choose a result from the Wilderness Chase Complications table. On a 7–12, no complication occurs.

TABLE 1.1 WILDERNESS COMPLICATIONS

1d12	Complication
1	You clearly hear someone singing loudly from a nearby bush. Make a DC 10 Wisdom saving throw or be momentarily distracted and lose 10 feet of movement. The voice comes from a singing bush (awakened shrub).
2	You smack into an invisible fence post left behind by the Harpells. Make a DC 13 Dexterity saving throw or take 1d6 bludgeoning damage and lose 10 feet of movement.
3	Make a DC 10 Constitution saving throw. On a failed save, blowing dust, dirt, or pollen causes you to have the Blinded condition until the end of your turn. While you are blinded in this way, your Speed is halved.
4	A sudden drop catches you by surprise. Make a DC 10 Dexterity saving throw to navigate the impediment. On a failed save, you fall 10 feet.
5	Your path takes you through a thicket of prairie cactus. Make a DC 15 Dexterity saving throw or use 10 feet of movement (your choice) to carefully avoid the spines. On a failed save, you take 1d10 piercing damage as the cactus thorns rake your arms and legs.
6	You trip over a single dirty left boot sitting upright in the grass. Make a DC 10 Dexterity saving throw or fall Prone. If you pick it up, it doesn't fit anyone.
7-12	There is no complication

Ending the Chase

The chase ends when all the longhorns have been calmed or restrained, or after 30 minutes of play have passed. Any cattle still running free by then are considered lost to the plains. If the characters interfered with the jackalwere hunt, they acquire the Story Award: Gogan Brothers Gang Feud.

Development

Unless the characters left someone to guard the cart, they return to an unfortunate surprise. During the chaos, Honey apparently wandered off, crossing a shallow dry ravine in pursuit of a patch of prickly pear growing on the far side. The mule made it across just fine. The cart didn't. Its axle cracked on the descent, and the already top-heavy, ugly-as-sin statue tipped over and smashed against the rail. Now, the shattered remains lie in jagged pieces across the cart bed. Honey stands beside it, cheerfully munching cactus pads with total disinterest.

Reward

If the characters return with at least half as many longhorns as there are members in their party (minimum 1), Lee, grateful for their help, rummages through her dusty pack and offers them a weathered leather pouch containing 20 gold pieces. If any of the lassos remain intact, Lee tells the characters they can keep them.

If the characters fail to bring back any longhorns, or fewer than the required amount, Lee is still thankful. With a resigned sigh, she mutters about how she's likely to lose her job and prepares for the long ride back to Zelorrgosz's ranch.

Encounter B. Ol' Stinkybutt

This encounter occurs after Lee, now mounted on her horse, departs with any longhorns the characters managed to wrangle. Read aloud or paraphrase the following:

> A shifting shadow glides over the tall grass. Moments later, the copper dragon swoops down and lands nearby, kicking up grass and dirt. The dragon bows low and calls out, "That was some mighty fine wrangling. You handled that better than I figured!"

Ol' Stinkybutt (young copper dragon) introduces themself as Nuragha. The copper dragon is talkative and shows all the signs of teenage immaturity. Slung beneath one foreleg by a makeshift leather strap is a wooden barrel of Mira's Creamy Condiment Co., its sides stained with streaks of oily white goo and sloshing ominously with spoiled mayonnaise, the dragon's fuel for his infamous aerial bombardments.

THE JOKE THAT WENT TOO FAR

Originally from the south, Nuragha is a young copper dragon who claimed a patch of rugged land near the southern Crag Mountains. One quiet afternoon as Nuragha lounged on a sunbaked ridge, watching a group of ranch hands mend a fence. One of the ranchers paused to tip back a drink when a passing bird delivered an accidental aerial bombardment right on his hat. The ranch hand yelped, slipped, and landed face-first in a cow patty. Nuragha roared with laughter. It was the funniest thing the young dragon had ever seen. If a bird could bring such joy by accident, imagine what a dragon could do on purpose. From that day on, Nuragha took to the skies, dropping "gifts" on Longsaddle's ranchers as part of his grand comedy. In his mind, it was a layered joke. Manure helps crops grow, right? Surely they'd be grateful. But fewer ranchers wave hello these days, and more wave pitchforks. Still, Nuragha remains convinced they'll come around eventually.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

NURAGHA "OL' STINKYBUTT"

Chaotic Good Copper Dragon (he/him) prankster

A lanky young copper dragon the size of a warhorse with an oversized grin and a tendency to talk with their manta-like wings.

What They Want. Nuragha wants to make people laugh, lighten their burdens, and bring joy to the world through elaborate pranks and spontaneous humor. Unfortunately, they often fail to understand the line between harmless fun and genuine trouble.

Dragon Teen. Nuragha is loud, attention seeking, and convinced they are much funnier than they actually are.

After explaining their "comedy," Ol' Stinkybutt looks at the characters expectantly, hoping for laughter or applause. When none is immediately forthcoming, the dragon frowns, tilts their head, and asks with genuine confusion, "Wait. You mean folks ain't enjoying this? That one had visual flair! Heck! I gave them free manure for their farm! Farmers love manure!"

The dragon listens to the characters, but interrupts often, defends their "art," and insists that humor is subjective. Still, Ol' Stinkybutt is not hostile, just clueless. Their starting attitude is Indifferent.

Development

The characters may resolve the situation by making a group check using one of the following Influence actions against a DC 15:

- A character can make a Charisma (Persuasion) check to explain why folks are angry or offer suggestions for more acceptable pranks.
- A character can make a Charisma (Deception) check to trick Ol' Stinkybutt by exaggerating the severity of the ranchers' reaction, pretending the Harpells are preparing magical retaliation, or claiming the longhorn statue is a tribute from a secret admirer.
- A character can attempt to scold Ol' Stinkybutt and point out that their pranks have harmed people. They can even point out that their dung isn't even fit for fertilizer. This requires a Charisma (Intimidation) check.

If the characters brought the giant longhorn statue or decide to use another appropriate gift, Ol' Stinkybutt is immediately enthralled by the gift. The characters gain Advantage on their Charisma-related skill checks.

Success convinces the copper dragon to try a new approach and stop the dung-bombing. Eventually, they sigh, stretches their wings, and nods in agreement. Read or paraphrase the following:

> "Fine. Perhaps the joke got a little out of hand. I believed folks would laugh. But if all I am doing is making people mad, then maybe it is time to rethink my approach."

Copper Plopper

If the characters fail their group check, Ol' Stinkybutt becomes defensive and flies off in a huff. As the dragon rises into the sky, he circles once, then lines up a parting shot. The characters have one round to act before the dragon prepares to bombard them. This is an improvised scene. If their preparations make sense and they succeed on a relevant check against DC 12, they gain Advantage on their upcoming Dexterity saving throw against the dragon's parting gift.

With theatrical flair, and zero shame, the dragon bombards a 20-foot-radius area centered on as many characters as possible. Each creature in the area must succeed on a DC 15 Dexterity saving throw or be thoroughly splattered, taking 1d6 psychic damage from the shame. The foul stench lingers on the character for the next 24 hours. A prestidigitation cantrip or a very good bath can remove the stench. The copper dragon then departs for the Crags, choosing to lay low until the folk of Longsaddle have had time to cool off.

If the characters attack Ol' Stinkybutt, the copper dragon shrieks in surprise, flares their wings, and immediately takes flight. The dragon wants no part of a serious fight, but they refuse to leave without leaving their mark. Before fleeing, the dragon banks hard, loops around, and delivers their signature parting prank. Afterwards, Ol' Stinkybutt vanishes into the skies and retreats deep into the Crags.

A failure outcome results in the characters receiving the Story Award: Watch the Skies.

Treasure

Ol' Stinkybutt remarks that the party has a lot of guts for standing up to a dragon and says they deserve something shiny for their courage. The copper dragon then begins to cough and gag like a cat with a hairball. After several dramatic heaves, they regurgitate a weathered six-string guitar glistening with dragon spit. Ol' Stinkybutt assures the characters it is one of their favorites. The copper dragon then departs for the Crags (taking their gift if there is one).

On the ground is the guitar, an Instrument of Illusions imbued with the Blissful quirk.

Conclusion

After dealing with the copper dragon, whether through diplomacy or disaster, the characters can return to Longsaddle. People are surprised to see them alive. Word spreads quickly, and by sundown, the locals gather at the Horn and Hoof tavern to celebrate the brave souls who stood face-to-face with Ol' Stinkybutt.

True to their word, the Harpells hands over a Shield of Expression imbued with the Metamorphic quirk to each of the characters as their reward. The face on the shield is a sculpted likeness of the dark elf ranger, Drizzt Do'Urden, created during a brief attempt to profit off the dark elf's widespread fame. When the shields failed to sell, they were tucked away in the Harpell's family vaults.

Success: The target is immune to this jackalwere's Sleep Gaze for 24 hours.

Bonus Actions

Shape-Shift. The jackalwere shape-shifts into a Medium human or a Medium jackal humanoid hybrid, or it returns to its true form (that of a Small jackal). Other than size, its game statistics are the same in each form. Any equipment it is wearing or carrying isn't transformed.

Appendix 2: Character Rewards

During the adventure, the characters may discover magic items or earn story awards. At the end of the session, award each character only the magic items or story awards they earned. It's suggested that you print enough copies of this page to hand out to each player, crossing out any rewards not received during the session.

Instrument of Illusions

Wondrous item, Common

While you are playing this musical instrument, you can take a Magic action to create harmless, illusory visual effects within a 5-foot Emanation originating from the instrument. If you are a Bard, the size of the Emanation increases to 15 feet. Sample visual effects include luminous musical notes, a spectral dancer, butterflies, and gently falling snow. The magical effects have neither substance nor sound, and they are obviously illusory. The effects end when you stop playing.

Blissful. You feel fortunate and optimistic about what the future holds. Butterflies and other harmless creatures might frolic in the item's presence.

This weathered six-string wooden guitar is sun-bleached, scarred, and stained from years of travel and tune.

Shield of Expression "The Do'Urden Shield"

Armor (Shield), Common

The front of this Shield is shaped in the likeness of a face. While bearing the Shield, you can take a Bonus Action to alter the face's expression.

Metamorphic. The item periodically alters its appearance in slight ways. You have no control over these minor alterations, which have no effect on the item's use.

The face on the shield is a sculpted likeness of the dark elf ranger, Drizzt Do'Urden. The Drizzt face might periodically alter its appearance without warning, sprouting a little mustache, frowning for no clear reason, or growing dramatically arched eyebrows during a tense moment. It might even wink at a viewer when no one else is looking.

Story Awards

Gogan Brothers Gang Feud

You done riled up the Gogan Brothers, a mean pack of jackalwere outlaws with slick smiles and murderous intent. Whatever it was you did, they took it real personal.

Watch the Skies

Someday, out on the plains near Longsaddle, you just might find yourself on the wrong end of another one of Ol' Stinkybutt's pranks.

Appendix 3. Dungeon Master Tips

To DM an adventure, you must have 3 to 7 players - each with their own character within the adventure's level range (see Adventure Primer). Characters playing in a hardcover adventure may continue to play too, but if they play a different hardcover adventure, they can't return to the first if they level beyond its level range.

Preparing the Adventure

Before you start play, consider the following:

- Read through the adventure, taking notes of anything you'd like to highlight or remind yourself of while running the adventure, such as a way you'd like to portray an NPC or a tactic you'd like to use in a combat. Familiarize yourself with the adventure's appendices and handouts.
- Gather any resources you'd like to use to aid you in running this adventure - such as notecards, a DM screen, miniatures, and battlemaps.
- Ask the players to provide you with relevant character information, such as name, race, class, and level; passive Perception score, and anything the adventures specifies as notable (such as backgrounds, traits, and flaws).

Players can play an adventure they previously played as a player or Dungeon Master but may only play it once with a given character. Ensure each player has their character's adventure logsheet (if not, get one from the organizer) with their starting values for level, magic items, gold and downtime days. These are updated at the conclusion of the session. The adventure information and your information are added at the end of the adventure session - whether they completed the adventure or not.

Each player is responsible for maintaining an accurate logsheet. If you've time, you can do a quick scan of a player's character sheet to ensure nothing looks out of order. If you see magic items of very high rarities or strange arrays of ability scores, you can ask players to provide documentation for the irregularities. If they cannot, feel free to restrict item use or ask them to use a standard ability score array.

Point players to the D&D Adventurers League Players Guide for reference. If players wish to spend downtime days and it's the beginning of an adventure or episode, they can declare their activity and spend the days now, or they can do so at the end of the adventure or episode. Players should select their characters' spells and other daily options prior to the start of the adventure, unless the adventure specifies otherwise. Feel free to reread the adventure description to help give players hints about what they might face.

Adjusting This Adventure

To determine whether you should consider adjusting the adventure, add up the total levels of all the characters and divide the result by the number of characters (rounding .5 or greater up; .4 or less down). This is the group's average party level (APL). To approximate the party strength for the adventure, consult the table below.

Determining Party Strength

Party Composition	Party Strength
3–4 characters, APL less than	Very Weak
3–4 characters, APL equivalent	Weak
3–4 characters, APL greater than	Average
5 characters, APL less than	Weak
5 characters, APL equivalent	Average
5 characters, APL greater than	Strong
6–7 characters, APL less than	Average
6–7 characters, APL equivalent	Strong
6–7 characters, APL greater than	Very Strong

Safety Tools

Safety tools ensure that players aren't pushed beyond their comfort levels. They let your players know that you want them to have a positive experience. Some common safety tools are provided below - each with a summary of how they work. Make sure you discuss them with your players before the game.

There are a broad range of safety tools available for you and your players online, but for more information reach out to your Event Organizer or to community@dndadventurersleague.org.
