ADVENTURE PRIMER

"Fanaticism requires extreme measures."
Bidderdoo Harpell, The Pirate King

Pretty Teeth, Sharp Teeth is designed for three to seven 1st-2nd-level characters and is optimized for five characters with an average party level (APL) of 1. Characters outside this level range cannot participate in this adventure. This adventure occurs in Longsaddle.

Background

A long time back, two squabbling cults took a shine to lakeside land near LONGSADDLE. Both sides followed MALAR, beast god of hunting and savagery. One bunch raised a chapel on the eastern bank, the other on the western. Well, that feud turned ugly in no time, and soon enough the land ran red with blood. THE HARPELLS, a family of eccentric wizards, transformed the worst offenders into RABBITS as a magical punishment, then banished them to a little island out in the lake. Though the original cultists are long gone, their bloodline lingers in these creatures. And wouldn't you know it, didn't take long for some fool to bring one of those rabbits back to the mainland.

Most folks figure that story's just a tale. But now and again, something stirs in the tall grass. A rabbit goes feral. Crops get torn up. Cattle scatter. Ranch hands come back with bite marks. Some of these rabbits are too big, too clever, and far too bold.

That's when the BLUE SIGIL got involved. A mercenary company made up of OGRES. One of their own, GERG, was hired by the local farmers to deal with the rabbit problem.

However, the RABBIT FOLK are not without cunning. The most intelligent among them, HARENGON PRIESTS OF MALAR, have devised a plan to mislead a group of adventurers, painting the ogre as the villain and turning their enemies against one another. All the while, they wait in the tall grass, watching to finish off whoever wins.

Overview

The adventure begins with a Call to Action scene and has one main Part. The adventure takes approximately 1 hour to play.

Call to Action. The characters are approached by a talking rabbit that seeks their help against an ogre. Agreeing to the task of dealing with the ogre is the Call to Action.

Part One: Hunters. The characters journey into the plains and confront the ogre, learning that not everything is as it seems. Defeating either the Ogre or the Rabbits of Malar is the Story Objective.

Adventure Hook

Use these hooks to explain why the characters are in Longsaddle.

Longriders. The character has heard that Longsaddle is a place where fortunes are made. Out on these frontier lands, ranchers, farmers, and wizards are always looking to hire folks who can fend off monsters, cattle thieves, and the occasional band of marauding barbarians.

Longsaddler. The character is or was a resident of Longsaddle or the surrounding lands. They know the local faces, the Harpells' reputation, and just how weird things can get around these parts. They might be just as strange themselves and have been accepted as part of the community all the same.

Faction Agent. The character is working with one of the many factions of Faerûn, an adventuring society, or a guild. Either way, they are temporarily stationed in Longsaddle between missions, gathering information, maintaining a presence, or awaiting new orders.

Harpell Apprentice. The character is currently staying at Ivy Mansion as part of an apprenticeship. Under the tutelage of the Harpells, they've been learning spells, dodging experiments gone wrong, and helping contain magical accidents. When the Harpells need someone to handle a strange task or investigate a disturbance, it's usually the apprentices who get volunteered.

Call to Action

Estimated Duration. 15 minutes

The characters are on the road together, hired out of Longsaddle to deliver a wagonload of fence posts and dry goods to the Greely Ranch, two days south of the hamlet. It isn't glamorous work, but Jed Greely promised 25 gold pieces upon delivery. Coin is coin, and the job also came with the promise of warm stew upon arrival. The merchant from Sixhorns Select Wares even lent them their mule to help with the hauling. Honey is a stubborn beast, no doubt about it, but easily persuaded with a carrot or two.

Setting: Longsaddle

The frontier hamlet of Longsaddle has always been a place where the strange is just plain common. Founded nigh on centuries ago, this small hamlet hugs a dusty stretch of the Long Road, catering to every rancher, farmer, and traveler passing through. It earned its fame thanks to the eccentric family of wizards known as the Harpells, who planted the Longsaddle square on the maps, whether the rest of Faerûn liked it or not. Tales of talking critters, dancing broomsticks, and spells gone sideways are just part of the scenery. Most folks just give a shrug and get on with their day.

Most of Longsaddle lies beyond the hamlet's modest limits, scattered across the rolling plains in a patchwork of ranches and farms. Horses, longhorns, and sheep are common enough sights, but some ranchers raise dinosaurs instead of cattle, and a few even herd beasts so peculiar you'd swear they escaped from a wizard's fever dream.

Call to Action

Agreeing to the task of dealing with the ogre is the Call to Action.

Meeting Jack the Rabbit

The characters are setting up camp for their first night beside the Long Road. Their wagon with Greely's goods is pulled into a shallow gully for shelter, the mule is munching on grass, and the sky is just beginning to trade its daylight for stars. This is the first evening shared by the characters. After character introductions and roleplay interactions with one another, read aloud or paraphrase the following:

> The wind moves gentle across the plains, rustling dry grass and stirring the scent of dust and sage. The Long Road lies quiet behind the rise, no travelers in sight, just the slow creak from the wagon and the occasional snort from the mule. Then, from the tall grass, something moves. Slow. Careful. A shape too upright for a dog and too small for a man. It steps into the edge of your light, ears twitching, eyes wide and unblinking.
> It's a rabbit. A big one. And then it speaks!
>
> "Pardon the intrusion, but might I trouble you for a moment of your time?"

Area Information

The plains have the following features.

Terrain. The plains stretch wide and open, a sea of tall grasses dotted with wildflowers, sagebrush, and the occasional lone tree or rocky outcrop. Characters can see about 2 miles in any direction on a clear day, except where obstructions block their view.

Lighting. During the day, the plains are bathed in bright light. A rocky outcrop or a lone tree provides shade, creating areas of dim light beneath them.

Sounds. Wind rustling through grass is a near-constant presence.

Weather. The plains are generally dry, with light winds. Daytime temperatures average around 72°F (22°C), while nights grow chilly, dropping to approximately 47°F (8°C).

Greely's Supplies

The characters have been supplied by Sixhorns Select Wares, a sundries store that sold all manner of useful items, with a wagon with 30 cedar fence posts (each post weighs 35 lbs.) and 405 lbs. worth of dry goods (consisting of flour, oats, dried beans, lard, pickled vegetables, salted pork, sugar, soap, candles, and matches). These supplies, along with the wagon and the mule, Honey, are considered story items and may not be kept by the characters at the end of the adventure session.

Creature Information

Jack is a priest acolyte with the following characteristics: size Small, fey creature type, and knows the Deception skill. Jack has no gear and relies on natural armor for protection. If Jack needs to defend himself, he relies on his Radiant Flame ability.

Jack hail the characters and ask for help, claiming that an evil ogre is trying to round up their family and devour them. He begs the party to slay the brute before more of their kin are lost. Jack claims they're too small to stand against such brute strength. That's why he has come seeking help.

Using the Search action, a character who succeeds on a DC 15 Wisdom (Insight) check notices something strange about Jack's expression. His eyes linger a little too long, watching the characters with an unsettling hunger. Still, there is something beneath their story that feels real. His words do not seem entirely false.

If confronted about his staring, Jack tilts his head slightly and admits, with a soft chuckle, that he has not eaten yet. His gaze drifts toward the mule, just for a moment, before flickering to the wagon. He sniffs at the air, then politely inquires whether the party might be willing to spare a bit of food for a weary traveler.

If the characters deny the request, Jack simply shrugs. If the characters choose to offer some of food, Jack accepts with a bow of thanks. He then tears into the meal with startling speed, devouring it in a manner that is anything but polite.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

JACK

Chaotic Evil Harengon (he/him) trickster

Jack's fur is a dusty gray, flecked with white, and his ears are long and expressive. The fey carries himself with a lazy confidence, slouching just enough to look harmless until he isn't.

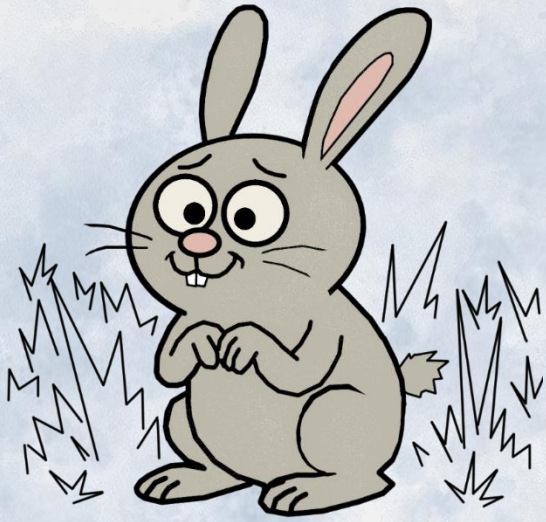

What They Want. Jack wants the humanoids and the giant to fight one another. Whoever wins will be weakened enough for the Rabbits of Malar to finish off.

Horrible with Names. Jack isn't very good at remembering names, or maybe he just doesn't care. He prefers to hand out offhand nicknames like "darlin," "guv," "sport," or "chuckles." He uses them whether they're insulting or not.

Development

If the characters ask for payment in exchange for their help, Jack admits that his burrow may hold something of value. An old magical helmet left behind by a druid. Should they choose to help, the treasure will be theirs to claim. If the characters decide not to help or attack Jack, the Harengon retreats into the tall grass. The rabbit folk will attempt to attack the characters later the next day (see Adjusting the Adventure in Part 1).

If the characters agree to help, Jack leads them through the plains to the ogre's location, about three miles away. If they intend to travel tomorrow, Jack gives directions instead, urging them to hurry. He then vanishes into the grass. Proceed to Part 1.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

Part 1: Hunters

Estimated Duration. 40 minutes

The ogre's location is about three miles from the camp, just off the Long Road across open plains. If the characters choose to continue to Greely's ranch, it takes a full day to reach it, and another day to backtrack to where Jack said the ogre was lurking. Once he leads the characters there, Jack vanishes into the tall grass.

Story Objective

Defeating either the Ogre or the Rabbits of Malar is the Story Objective.

Meeting Gerg

From a mile off, they spot a hulking figure crouched low in the tall grass near a patch of scrub and dirt. If the characters choose to approach, read or paraphrase the following:

> As you draw closer, it becomes clear it's an ogre, hunched awkwardly over a hunting trap beside a rabbit burrow. His mounting frustration is plain as day.

Creature Information

Gerg (Chaotic Neutral, ogre) is clearly unsuited for delicate work. He's part of the Blue Sigil, a mercenary company of ogres based out of Mog's Keep near Longsaddle. Gerg hasn't noticed the characters yet. If he does, he grunts and waves them off, wanting to be left alone. His starting attitude is Indifferent. In the surrounding brush are three hunting traps (including the one that Gerg is working on), though none of them are currently functional. A character proficient with tinker's tools can repair a hunting trap with a successful DC 13 Intelligence check, taking about ten minutes per trap. Concealing each hunting trap requires a successful DC 14 Wisdom (Survival) check.

Gerg

Chaotic Neutral Ogre (he/him) mercenary

What They Want. Gerg wants to finish his job and return to Longsaddle to collect his reward.

Talks Funny. Gerg speaks with a soft, rounded tone, replacing their R's and L's with W's. Words like "really" become "weawwy," and "look out, rabbit!" becomes "wook out, wabbit!"

Characters who study the brand on the ogre's butt can take the Study action and make a DC 10 Intelligence (History) check to recognize the symbol. The Blue Sigil is a mercenary company of ogres, formed after their tribe decided to fight back against constant adventurer raids. Now operating across the North, they've earned a reputation for reliability.

Development

The characters may choose to attack Gerg. The ogre defends himself as best he can, aiming to knock the characters unconscious rather than kill them. If slain, after one hour, the rabbits emerge from their burrow to see what happened. Upon finding the ogre dead, they seem delighted. They slip out in great numbers to dance in a circle around the characters… before launching a sudden assault. If the characters have already moved on from the area, the rabbits hunt after the characters. See When Rabbits Attack.

Adjusting the Scene

Here are some suggestions for adjusting this scene:

- Weak. Gerg is an ogrillion ogre that starts with 34 hit points.
- Average. Gerg starts with 34 hit points.
- Strong. Gerg has his standard hit point total.

If the characters ask why the ogre is hunting the rabbits, read or paraphrase the following:

> The ogre squints at you with heavy-lidded eyes, scratching his belly as he speaks in a soft, oddly gentle voice. "Wanchers 'wound Wongsaddwe paid me to smash wabbits," he says. "Dey's causin' twoubwe. Scawin' da cows. I smash, dey pay. That's the deaw."

Gerg basically explains he was hired by farmers near Longsaddle. The rabbits have been attacking livestock, ruining crops, and stealing eggs from chicken rookeries. A few cattle even vanished. The farmers offered coin to the Blue Sigil and permission to smash whatever he found. That was good enough for Gerg.

If the characters choose to help the ogre, Gerg suggests making camp near the rabbit burrow and waiting for the creatures to strike after dark. If any hunting traps have been repaired and successfully concealed, one rabbit of malar is caught in each trap when the rabbits attack that night.

Optionally, the characters can enter the burrow (Area R1). Gerg is too large to fit inside and remains nearby. Characters who take the time to explore the surrounding area may discover a second entrance to the burrow (Area R2), hidden beneath a tangle of roots and grass. Finding it requires a successful DC 15 Intelligence (Investigation) check.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

Area Information

The Rabbit Burrow has the following features:

Dimensions and Terrain. The tunnels are made of packed dirt, roughly 3 feet high and 3 feet wide, just large enough for a Medium creature to crawl on hands and knees. Movement for Medium creatures is treated as difficult terrain. Small creatures can move through the tunnels with little difficulty.

Lighting. There are no sources of light within the burrow, except for the magic helm in area R4.

Sounds. The burrow walls muffle most sound from the outside. Periodically there are unsettling rabbit shrieks that echo from deeper in the warren.

Alert. If the sound of combat breaks out anywhere within the burrow, all nearby inhabitants converge on the source of the sound and join the fight as quickly as possible.

Entrances (R1 and R2). These are the primary and secondary access points to the burrow from the surface.

Rabbit Nests (R3). Several nests made of fur, grass, and gnawed bones are tucked into the walls of the tunnels. At your option, a nest is occupied or vacant (see When Rabbits Attack).

Shrine to Malar (R4). Deep within the warren, the walls are smeared with muddy pawprints and streaks of red. The shrine itself is fashioned from matted tufts of fur, splintered bones, and gnawed antlers arranged into a rough altar. A claw-shaped symbol is etched into the dirt floor. A successful DC 13 Intelligence (Religion) check identifies it as the symbol of Malar, god of the hunt, bloodlust, and bestial savagery. The shrine chamber has a 10-foot ceiling.

Holiday Connections

If you'd like, you can add the following detail to Area R4. Nestled in woven grass baskets at the foot of the shrine are 2d4 brightly dyed eggs. Offerings to Malar left by the rabbit folk. Characters can identify them as mundane chicken eggs.

Why are there eggs here? Malarite mumbo jumbo.

Treasure

At the foot of the shrine rests a glowing steel helm with a polished bronze hue, crowned with curving bull horns. This is a Dread Helm imbued with the Beacon minor property.

When Rabbits Attack

If the characters defeat Gerg, crawl into the rabbit burrow, or wait until nightfall with Gerg, the rabbit folk launch an attack. The rabbits of malar use the giant badger stat block with the following adjustments: Size Small.

The harengon priest uses the priest acolyte stat block with these adjustments: Size Small, fey creature type, and proficiency in the Deception skill. They have no chain shirt and mace and rely on natural armor for protection. Their alignment is Chaotic Evil. The harengon priest rely on their Radiant Flame for attacking. The swarm of rabbits use the swarm of rats stat block.

If Jack is still alive, he leads the assault.

For Strong groups, replace harengon priest with a harengon druid with these adjustments: Size Small, fey creature type, and proficiency in the Deception skill. They have no studded leather and rely on natural armor for protection. Their alignment is Chaotic Evil. The Harengon Druid rely on their Verdant Wisp and Spellcasting for attacking.

Adjusting the Scene

Here are some suggestions for adjusting this scene:

- Very Weak. Remove a rabbit of malar
- Weak. Remove a swarm of rabbits
- Average. A harengon priest, two rabbits of malar, and a swarms of rabbit
- Strong. Replace harengon priest with harengon druid
- Very Strong. Add two rabbits of malar

Adjusting the Adventure

It's entirely possible the characters decide not to help Jack, ignore the ogre situation, and focus on doing their job. Delivering Greely's goods before heading back to Longsaddle. If that's the case, the Rabbits of Malar aren't quite done with them. During the journey to the ranch or on the return trip, the rabbits launch an ambush, striking from the tall grass. If the characters choose to follow the tracks after the battle, a successful DC 12 Wisdom (Survival) check leads them back to the rabbit burrow. By this time, Gerg is already dead. His carcass has been dragged into the burrow and now rests in Area R4. Only a few rabbit folk are left behind.

If there is not enough time for the adventure session, then all the rabbit folk have fled from the burrow.

Adjusting the Scene

Here are some suggestions for the few rabbit folk left behind:

- Average. A harengon priest and swarm of rabbits
- Strong. Replace harengon priest with harengon druid

Clerics and Acolytes of Malar

If one of the characters is a known devotee of Malar, the rabbit folk may view the character as a traitor to the faith. In this case, they focus their fury on that character.

Development

Once the rabbits are defeated, the characters can explore the burrow and recover the treasure in Area R4. If Gerg is still alive, the ogre thanks them and begins collecting rabbit carcasses as proof for the farmers of Longsaddle. If the characters ask for a share of the bounty, Gerg explains that the contract was made between his handlers in the Blue Sigil and the farmers. He doesn't have a say in how the reward is divided. Still, he invites the party to meet him later at the Gilded Horseshoe, a local inn, and promises to treat them to the best breakfast in all the North. Once the characters are ready to return to Longsaddle or complete their delivery of Greely's supplies, proceed to Conclusion.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

Conclusion

Estimated Duration. 5 minutes

This adventure has a few different endings, depending on the choices the characters made along the way.

- If the characters sided with Gerg and helped him defeat the Rabbits of Malar, they return to Longsaddle to a warm welcome. See Meeting Up with Gerg and the Farmers of Longsaddle Ending.
- If Gerg was slain but the Rabbits of Malar were destroyed, the people of Longsaddle still offer gratitude for the party's actions. See the Farmers of Longsaddle Ending.
- If the characters chased off Jack during the Call to Action, chose to deliver Greely's goods instead, and never ventured to the rabbit burrow, see You Won't Believe What Happened Ending.
- If the characters slew Gerg, well… see This Means War Ending.

Meeting Up with Gerg

Back in Longsaddle, the characters make their way to the Gilded Horseshoe . True to his word, Gerg is waiting for them. Gerg is cleaned up as best he can be and already working his way through a platter of smoked sausage. He waves the characters over with a grin and treats them to a hearty breakfast, all paid in full. Between mouthfuls, he raises a mug and toasts their help, calling them "the best wabbit-smashers this side o' the Spine." The characters earn the Story Award: Ogre Friend.

The Farmers of Longsaddle

Now word don't take long to travel around, folks in Longsaddle know what the characters done out on them wild plains. The farmers of Longsaddle can't pay the bounty for the rabbits directly, due to their contract with the Blue Sigil mercenary group. They're not keen on upsetting an entire company of ogres.

However, they offer another form of thanks for the characters role in clearing out the nest of predatory varmints. The characters are each presented with a token of local gratitude: hand-stitched embroidered bandana trinkets, a basket of fresh baked goods and preserves, and, most notably, a weapon from local legend.

The farmers gather to present the group with a magic spear once wielded by a retired adventurer turned goat herder named Zigfreed. Zigfreed claimed he was the best dragon-slayer this side of the Spine of the World. Spent his final years watching over his land with naught but his goats, a jug of moonshine, and that spear by his side. The farmers reckon the characters can do more with it. Zigfreed's Spear is a Sylvan Talon imbued with the Songcraft minor property.

You Won't Believe What Happened

Now when the characters mosey on back into Longsaddle, they find the hamlet's already stirring with talk of trouble. Folks whisper about rabbits attacking farms and their livestock. Turns out the farmers hired Gerg, that ogre from the Blue Sigil mercenary company, to handle the mess. But wouldn't you know it, things went sideways. The poor ogre wound up dead, and when the Longsaddlers went to check the burrow, there wasn't a hare left in sight. Just an empty warren and a nasty little shrine to Malar, the god of blood, fang, and the hunt. Folks reckon them Rabbits of Malar are still out there.

This Means War

In time, the Blue Sigil mercenaries piece together what really happened. After interrogating a captured Malarite rabbit, they learn the truth. The characters killed Gerg, one of their own. The characters acquire the Story Award: Blue Sigil Feud. The ogres of the North don't forget a slight, and they don't forgive one, either.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

REWARDS

At the end of the session, the characters receive rewards based upon their accomplishments.

CHARACTER REWARDS

The characters earn the following rewards:

Advancement

A character participating in this adventure gains one level.

Gold

If found during the adventure the following items are converted to gold and added to any coins found during the adventure. The gold is split among the party members. If someone wants to keep an item in particular that character can either take it as part of their share, or pay for it with their own gold. Mundane items are not duplicated nor included in this.

Item	Gold Value
Greely's Reward	25 gp
Maximum	25 gp

Magic Item(s)

If found during the adventure, the characters can keep the following magic items; these items are described in Appendix 2:

- Dread Helm
- Sylvan Talon (Spear)

Story Awards(s)

- Blue Sigil Feud
- Ogre Friend

These awards are described in Appendix 2.

DUNGEON MASTER REWARDS

For running this adventure, you earn a DM Reward. See the Adventurers League Dungeon Master's Guide for more information.

Not for resale. Permission granted to print or photocopy this document for personal use only.

Appendix 2. Character Rewards

During the adventure, the characters may discover magic items or earn story awards. At the end of the session, award each character only the magic items or story awards they earned. It's suggested that you print enough copies of this page to hand out to each player, crossing out any rewards not received during the session.

Dread Helm

Wondrous item, Common

While you're wearing this fearsome steel helm, your eyes glow red and the rest of your face is hidden in shadow. This item can be found in the Dungeon Master's Guide.

Beacon. You can take a Bonus Action to cause the item to shed Bright Light in a 10- foot radius and Dim Light for an additional 10 feet, or to extinguish the light.

The dread helm resembles a steel helm with a polished bronze hue, crowned with curving bull horns.

Sylvan Talon (Spear)

"Zigfreed's Spear"

Weapon (Spear), Common (requires Attunement)

While this weapon is on your person, you understand the nonwritten communication of all Fey, and they understand yours.

Secret Message. As a Magic action, you can use the weapon to cast Message. Once this property is used, it can't be used again until the next dawn.

This weapon can be found in the Dungeon Master's Guide.

Songcraft. Whenever this item is struck or is used to strike a foe, you hear a fragment of an ancient song.

This slender spear is carved from an ancient ash tree said to have grown in a faerie glade. When used to strike a foe, you hear a fragment of Wagner's Ride of the Valkyries.

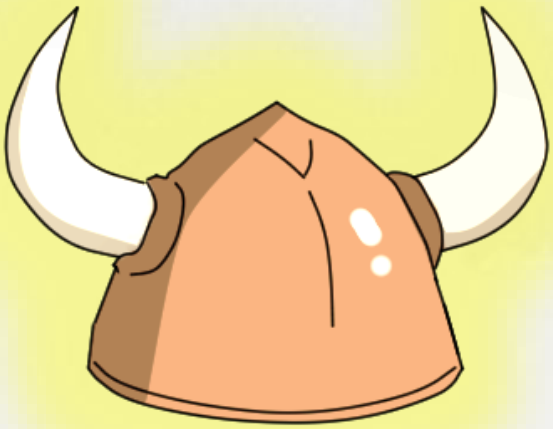

Story Awards

Blue Sigil Feud

You made enemies of the ogre mercenary company known as the Blue Sigil after killing one of their own. The ogres of the North don't forget a slight, and they sure don't forgive one. Sooner or later, they'll come calling.

Ogre Friend

You met Gerg, an ogre mercenary from the Blue Sigil company, and somehow made a good impression. He's taken a shine to ya, and in his own gwuff way, he cawws you a fwiend.

Appendix 3. Dungeon Master Tips

To DM an adventure, you must have 3 to 7 players - each with their own character within the adventure's level range (see Adventure Primer). Characters playing in a hardcover adventure may continue to play too, but if they play a different hardcover adventure, they can't return to the first if they level beyond its level range.

Preparing the Adventure

Before you start play, consider the following:

- Read through the adventure, taking notes of anything you'd like to highlight or remind yourself of while running the adventure, such as a way you'd like to portray an NPC or a tactic you'd like to use in a combat. Familiarize yourself with the adventure's appendices and handouts.
- Gather any resources you'd like to use to aid you in running this adventure—such as notecards, a DM screen, miniatures, and battlemaps.
- Ask the players to provide you with relevant character information, such as name, race, class, and level; passive Perception score, and anything the adventures specifies as notable (such as backgrounds, traits, and flaws).

Players can play an adventure they previously played as a player or Dungeon Master but may only play it once with a given character. Ensure each player has their character's adventure logsheet (if not, get one from the organizer) with their starting values for level, magic items, gold and downtime days. These are updated at the conclusion of the session. The adventure information and your information are added at the end of the adventure session—whether they completed the adventure or not.

Each player is responsible for maintaining an accurate logsheet. If you've time, you can do a quick scan of a player's character sheet to ensure nothing looks out of order. If you see magic items of very high rarities or strange arrays of ability scores, you can ask players to provide documentation for the irregularities. If they cannot, feel free to restrict item use or ask them to use a standard ability score array.

Point players to the D&D Adventurers League Players Guide for reference. If players wish to spend downtime days and it's the beginning of an adventure or episode, they can declare their activity and spend the days now, or they can do so at the end of the adventure or episode. Players should select their characters' spells and other daily options prior to the start of the adventure, unless the adventure specifies otherwise. Feel free to reread the adventure description to help give players hints about what they might face.

Adjusting This Adventure

To determine whether you should consider adjusting the adventure, add up the total levels of all the characters and divide the result by the number of characters (rounding .5 or greater up; .4 or less down). This is the group's average party level (APL). To approximate the party strength for the adventure, consult the table below.

Determining Party Strength

Party Composition	Party Strength
3–4 characters, APL less than	Very Weak
3–4 characters, APL equivalent	Weak
3–4 characters, APL greater than	Average
5 characters, APL less than	Weak
5 characters, APL equivalent	Average
5 characters, APL greater than	Strong
6–7 characters, APL less than	Average
6–7 characters, APL equivalent	Strong
6–7 characters, APL greater than	Very Strong

Safety Tools

Safety tools ensure that players aren't pushed beyond their comfort levels. They let your players know that you want them to have a positive experience. Some common safety tools are provided below—each with a summary of how they work. Make sure you discuss them with your players before the game.

There are a broad range of safety tools available for you and your players online, but for more information reach out to your Event Organizer or to community@dndadventurersleague.org.
